

SUZETTE LLEWELLYN

Suzette Llewellyn was born in London of Jamaican parentage. She trained at LAMDA and has been working professionally for four years.

Her theatre includes performances as Viola in Twelfth Night with the Northumberland Theatre Company, Luciana in Comedy Of Errors and Dorcas in Golden Girls, both at the Wolsey Theatre, Ipswich, Binns in Garden Girls, an award winning play by Jacqueline Holbrough at the Bush Theatre and most recently Nina in The Trinidad Sisters at the Donmar Warehouse Theatre.

For Yorkshire Television she appeared with Rik Myall in the second series of The New Statesman, in the BBC's Rockcliffes Babies, Thames Television's serial of Widows, and last year she worked on a new series for Channel 4 shortly to be seen here entitled Surgical Spirit.

Suzette's first film was the Zenith production of Personal Services, quickly followed by roles in Playing Away, Samie And Rosie and For Queen And Country.

This is Suzette's debut at the Lyric.

FAY HOWARD

Originally from Rostrevor, Co Down, Fay did her classical training in London at the Arts Educational. She returned home to play her first professional role at the Riverside Theatre, Coleraine where she was cast in the unlikely part of the son in Tartuffe!

This play together with Playboy Of The Western World and The Real Maria Martin, made up a repertoire which toured schools in the Province. The company then returned in the evening to present Neil Simon's Plaza Suite to adult audiences.

Recent stage work has been in Belfast at the Arts Theatre where she appeared as Mary Featherstone in Alan Ayckbourn's How The Other Half Loves, Honey in Edward Albee's Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf? and as Kay Mostyn in Agatha Christie's Murder On The Nile.

Fay's television work includes the BBC1 premiere series, the role of Nurse Adrienne O'Shea in Angels, Granada television's Hard To Get, Choosing for RTE and Bill Morrison's Potato Head Blues for BBC. She regularly appears in the RTE series Glenroe.

Fay will be remembered for her role as Louise in After The Fall at the Lyric earlier this year.
